National Context for HWBs

Drivers and barriers to effective Health and Wellbeing Boards

Committed leaders, both political and managerial

Collaborative plumbing, often reflecting a history of partnership working

Clarity of purpose, being clear about the primary task of the board

A geography that works, or has been made to work

The response to austerity, which can drive either collaboration or a retreat to silos

A focus on place, with local priorities that drive collaboration

A focus on prevention, and the wider determinants of health

High quality support, and a flexible approach to the council committee thing

Churn in the system, within local government and health

Getting the basics right, to enable effective systems leadership
