FV/13

If you are being emotionally abused, threatened, physically or sexually assaulted by a partner, a former partner, or a family member, there is help available.

It doesn't have to be physical abuse; it can be emotional and verbal abuse or financial control.

The health and well-being of you and your children can be seriously affected by living in households where there is any form of abuse.

How can we help?

There are different types of help available:

Community Services

If you do not want to leave your home, we can support you in the community, providing practical and emotional support as you decide about your future. We offer 1 to 1 sessions, group programmes and informal drop-in sessions. Support can cover issues such as personal safety, legal and housing matters and we can put you in touch with other organisations that can also assist.

Refuges

We can provide a safe place for you and your children to live while you decide what you want to do next. Our refuges offer self contained flats or houses and you'll receive practical and emotional support from our staff whatever next steps you choose.

Children & Young People's Service

We can help your children to deal with the affects of witnessing or experiencing abuse through 1 to 1 support and group support.
